Everybody has a home. We humans have homes. Animals have homes, too.

Some animals live under the ground. The woodchuck (土拨鼠) lives in holes under the ground. His home has two doors. If anyone comes in from one door, he goes out from the other door. They use this way to save their lives when enemies (敌人) come. Some birds live in holes in trees. They come out for food in the daytime and go back to sleep at night. But many birds live just in the trees. They sing and play in trees and find something to eat as well. It’s quite interesting that turtles (海龟) carry their homes on their backs. They are hard and enemies can’t eat them because of their homes. They can hide (躲藏) themselves in their homes. Bees (蜜蜂) work hard to make their homes. There are many small rooms in their house. Cats, dogs and chicks live in people’s homes.

So interesting, isn’t it?

China has many places of interest. You can have great tours (旅行) for every season.

Spring is the best time to visit Wuyuan in Jiangxi. The yellow flowers all over the hills make the villages look like a fairy tale (童话) world. You’ll have free time to walk across the beautiful countryside and enjoy the famous tea.

The best time to visit Changbai Mountain in Jilin is August. It’s usually sunny. Why not go to the Stone Forest (石林), Changbai Mountain caves (长白山溶洞) and Heaven’s Lake (天池) at the top? You’ll have time to take lots of photos.

You can see all the colours of autumn near the Great Wall. It’s cool and dry, so it’s great for hiking. You’d better walk on the Mutianyu Wall. There won’t be as many tourists as at the Badaling Wall, but it’s just as beautiful.

Sanya on Hainan Island (岛) is great for a holiday in winter. You can get away from the cold. The three famous beaches, Yalongwan, Sanyawan and Dadonghai, all have great sand. You’ll love swimming in the clear water.

You can have a great time in different seasons!
